Consultancy

There can be any number of reasons why you are thinking of using the services of a consultant.

Organisations, including schools, go through periods of change and development. It can be helpful to have someone with a wide range of experience to help and guide you through the process.

We work as a cross-cutting partnership, involving statutory, private and voluntary and community sectors in the delivery of Children's Services into emerging models for Children's Trusts arrangements in the public sector.

We support partners, individual schools and clusters, by taking a lead on the development of Extended School programmes. We deliver innovative projects, aligned to the outcomes of Every Child Matters outcome, including Enjoying and Achieving. Access to additional funding can also help create pathways for long term sustainability.

We use our skills to migrate and mainstream current service provision as existing funding streams come to a close.

We always strive to work within a multi-agency partnership framework, helping you to deliver integrated childcare that will benefit children and families locally, regionally and nationally. We bring current policy and delivery practice.

We are happy to talk to prospective clients and partners without obligation.

How we work

We are always happy to review plans and listen to your ideas and needs without any commitment on your part.

We are always happy to offer proposals, timetables and costs – in writing, clearly defined and before we begin work on your behalf.

We will provide you with a work plan and we will complete our work for you on time, within budget and taking ownership of only those parts of the work you instruct us to.

Any of our principals or associates will have a minimum of three years direct experience in the practice we offer.

Consultancy

Sue Martin – Primary responsibility for children and young people's services, child-care and education.

Sue's career profile has crossed several sectors and has been formed from an extensive background in education and substantial work with children in diverse and disadvantaged communities. In line with the evolving agenda for children and young people, recent projects have focused on the development of services for children and young people in fully active communities. This expertise is used for multi-agency partnership working with statutory, voluntary and private sectors. This is underpinned by a combination of knowledge and experience in management and educational settings.

A passion for encouraging creativity has enabled projects to develop a vitality and enthusiasm to sustain interest and effect long term future success. Visionary ideas, coupled with a pragmatic understanding have helped to turn concepts into successful realities and created opportunities in which children can shine.
